Crafting Interior Experiences

Designing Future-Ready Work Environments

Where spaces tell stories

Step into the story of BIG BOX's transformation, shaped by Whitehills Interior's skillful hands and imaginative vision.

Introduction

Crafting experiences, not just spaces.

At Whitehills Interior Limited, we see every project as an opportunity to transform spaces into environments that inspire and empower.

When BIG BOX, a dynamic and fast-growing managed workspace company, approached us to design their interiors, we felt privileged to contribute to their mission of delivering world-class workplace experiences to enterprises and start-ups.

BIG BOX's focus on flexibility, security, and fostering strong relationships with its clients and partners guided our design process every step of the way. By blending functionality with contemporary aesthetics, we crafted interiors that resonate with their mission to create thriving environments for enterprises and start-ups.

This collaboration has resulted in a space that not only meets BIG BOX's high standards but also stands as a testament to the power of thoughtful design. We feel delighted to have played a role in shaping a workspace that inspires success and drives growth.

Process of Research

Crafting experiences, not just spaces.

Designing customer-focused interiors is our expertise, so we made sure to thoroughly understand every detail before starting despite the tight timeline.

After visiting BIG BOX's existing office space, we discovered that the first floor was already designed, and our task was to design the second floor in a way that aligned with the first while raising the overall standard.

We took the time to conduct the necessary research to understand BIG BOX's needs and what they expected from Whitehills Interiors.

Once we compiled all our findings, we moved forward with creating a schematic design.

Plan of Action

Crafting experiences, not just spaces.

With a clear understanding of the project's needs, we quickly translated our insights into a detailed schematic design plan for the BIG BOX's interior.

Our focus was on creating a space that was functional, comfortable, and efficient. The plan included key elements such as strategically placed meeting rooms to support collaboration, executive cabins designed for a professional atmosphere, and a limited yet effective number of storage solutions to keep the space organized.

We also incorporated open workspaces to encourage creativity and teamwork, a well-equipped pantry for convenience, and ample washrooms to meet the needs of all employees.

Each aspect of the design was carefully considered to ensure the space would serve its purpose seamlessly.

Let's unravel it corner by corner!

Time To Execute the Plans

Turning 9500 sq.ft of space into a multifunctional and aesthetically pleasing workspace has been an exhilarating journey. Every inch of this workspace reflects a seamless blend of creativity and purpose at every stage.

Turning Strategic

Challenges into Creative Triumphs.

Crafting Efficiency in the Petite Spaces

Challenge: When our client approached us to design a 9300 sq ft space, we knew the challenge was to make it feel larger than it actually was while boosting its efficiency and functionality. It wasn't just about fitting everything in - it was about making each corner work harder.

Solution

To meet this challenge, we focused on keeping the space feeling open and uncluttered. We designed open workstations to encourage flow and interaction, used open ceiling plans to create a sense of height and airiness, and kept the walls simple with plain white tones to make the space feel bigger. To ensure the space was still functional, we added side storage, keeping everything organized without taking up too much room. We embraced the challenge and transformed the space into one that feels open and welcoming while meeting every practical need.

Challenges into Creative Triumphs.

Designing OCD's

Challenge: Designing a coworking space for employees from different companies was a challenge. We had to balance collaboration with privacy while respecting each company's unique identity.

Solution

To overcome this challenge, we focused on creating distinct yet cohesive zones within the shared space. We used high-quality carpets to define areas without overwhelming the open layout, giving each team a sense of ownership. Linear lighting added a modern, streamlined look, highlighting key areas while maintaining a clean, unified aesthetic.

The workstations offered privacy and openness, ensuring each employee had a dedicated, functional space. This thoughtful combination of elements helped foster collaboration while still respecting the individuality of each professional.

Key Areas We Designed

A design philosophy centered on people.

The office floor features multiple Open Development Centers (ODCs), designed to meet unique requirements of different brands & clients. Every ODC includes dedicated meeting rooms & executive cabins, providing space for focused discussions & leadership activities.

The floor also offers essential amenities, such as a fully equipped pantry and convenient washrooms. Employees can unwind or collaborate in the breakout area, while the lobby creates a welcoming and professional atmosphere for visitors and clients.

We shaped spaces - now they shape experiences.

Merge Efficiency with Timeless Design

Distinct Brand Identity

Each office space is designed thoughtfully. Different sections reflect the branding of other clients. Bigbox's managed space perfectly delivers what its clients are looking for. This approach created a vibrant, professional atmosphere that motivates employees and leaves a positive impression on visitors.

Amplified Office Space Area

Designing a managed office in a small space is challenging, but Whitehills Interior proves it's achievable with the BigBox project. Using white walls and open layouts, we created an office that feels larger and more inviting. Cleverly integrated side storage maximizes functionality without compromising space. Delivered on time, this project showcases our expertise in crafting efficient, stylish workspaces.

BigBox's interior reflects our commitment to smart design, proving that even compact offices can be both practical and inspiring. Whitehills transform space with purpose and precision.

Whitehills Interior specializes in office interior design, offering a comprehensive range of services tailored to transform workspaces into functional and visually captivating environments.
